ROBERT & JOHN GRAY
HAVE JUST RECEIVED
A large supply of Dr. Stoughton's
GENUINE BITTERS,
THE happy effects, and superior efficacy of these bitters, can be testified by hundreds in A lexandria and its neighbourhood, during the pre ailing sickness last summer. We believe that every person, who then perished in regularly taking them, resisted the attacks of the fever.
They brace the constitution, create appetite, as sist digestion, and relieve the cholice; in short, in all complaints of the stomach and bowels they have been proved to be eminently efficacious.
Hence, they resist malignant fevers, and are a preventive to the ague. A course of these bit ters, begun now, may prove highly beneficial, as they will gradually prepare the system to underg
the danger of a sickly summer.
There are many counterfeits. Purchasers will please to observe that the genuine Stoughton's Bitters are sealed with the first letter of the Doc tor's surname, and full directions pasted on each bottle. Tavern keepers and liquor stores, will find it to their advantage to use them, as from superior strength alone they may be considered to cost no more than the trash so often imposed upon them. They are also sold by Rapine, Conrad and Co. Capitol Hill, City of Washington; Mr.
March, George Town, and Mr. A. Buck, Fre derickburg. Also just received,
ESSENCE OF SPRUCE,

MAXIMS

AND DETACHED THOUGHTS.

(CONCLUDED.)

He who loves God, is alone wise; dignified and happy man: for he loves the only good, worthy the affections, of an immortal mind. He loves a friend who alone possesses almighty power to protect him, unerring wisdom to counsel him, and infinite love to guard him.

Power and wealth may be respected, wit, beauty and accomplishments may be admired; but if separated from goodness of heart, they neither deserve, nor can command our love.

Man as being circumscribed in his nature, and subject to events which he cannot command, must, if left to himself, fluctuate in uncertainty, and struggle with disappointment; he therefore who would hope with confidence, and enjoy with security, must have a resource, which time and chance cannot effect; which can only be; in that independent Being, in whose hands are the issues of life and death.

He who has more knowledge than judgment, is made for the use of others rather than his own.

Knowledge prepares and disposes for practice, and practice is the way to perfect knowledge of any kind.

There is this difference between a wise man and a fool, the foibles of the former are known only to himself, while those of the other are concealed from himself, but known to the world.

When you pass by an injury let it not seem by the way of timorousness or carelessness; for that will not fail to invite many more.

Hospitality is good if the poor be the subjects of bounty; otherwise it borders on prodigality.

Happy are they, who amid the darkness and perplexities of life, keep their eye fixed on that land of rest, to which the view directs them: who neither annoy their fellow travellers by wickedness or injustice; but by a thousand gentle attentions, strive to lighten their anxieties, and beguile the length of way.

Though passion is a violent and insolent master, it will some times relax of its severities; but habit is an obdurate and relentless tyrant, which holds the mind enslaved in cruel and perpetual bondage.

Pleasant is the path of that man, whose conduct is regulated by wisdom—Who considers this life in connection with the next. Who moderates his desires, and preserves the powers of his mind in equal balance. His wishes can never be disappointed because the object of them is immutable; his schemes can never be frustrated for they are built on the foundation of truth; and time which accelerates the distribution of all things mortal, speeds on the hour of his safety, triumph, and everlasting joy.

Let us not consider life as unprofitable and vain, while there exists a human being whom we can assist by our advice, relieve by our alms, or encourage with our approbation: to whom our pity can supply comfort, or our affection pleasure.

It is necessary to form mental connections as well as social, as there are many hours, when the mind must refer to its own treasures for support; and as the former are less liable to be broken than the latter, they are more worthy our cultivation.

To take a sincere pleasure in the blessings or excellencies of others, is a surer mark of a benevolent mind, than to pity their calamities.

We should often blush at some of our greatest actions, if the world saw the motives on which they were founded.

It is the best mark of wisdom to do nothing to-day which we may repent to-morrow.

We ought not to be affected by the opinion of any but wise and good men; and even by theirs only so far as they evidently coincide with truth and our own consciences.

A generous disposition returns not evil for evil nor seeks to wound the heart, even of his greatest enemy. He studies to reconcile by kindness, and if he fails in this, leaves the punishment to their own minds which seldom fails to inflict with interest.

The proneness of our hearts to error ought to be a constant admonition to us, to spend the remainder of our days in pursuit of that wisdom which will lead us to a state of greater perfection.

When we consider the shortness of human life, resignation on the death of our friends seems scarcely a virtue, for yet a few years and the sorrowing will rest in silence with them whom they deplore—For yet a few years, and all the cares, griefs and inquietudes of life will be buried in oblivion.

[The following Remarks on the utility of NEWSPAPERS, are copied from an English publication.]

NEWSPAPERS are a powerful instrument in the hands of genius and dexterity, for diffusing the opinions, and influencing the conduct of mankind. To the rapid circulation of political knowledge, by these means, America and Ireland will be forever highly indebted; deriving as much power from the energy of the press, as from the bravery of her volunteers; the one owes to it her independence, the other her deliverance from political thralldom; victory, in both cases, had been clearly preceded by the force of reasoning, and the strong conviction of sound argument, which, in most struggles, have proved superior to the "ultima ratio regum." England is not without her obligations to these diurnal deposits of the crude attempts of literary tyros; they exercised and perfected the moral and critical acumen of Johnson, the elegant invective, and weighty political truths of Junius. I speak not of the party writings of the moralist, those effusions of pensioned torism were totally unworthy of his pen.

"If it were possible for the liberty of the press to exist in a despotic government, without changing the constitution (a supposition, I confess, somewhat difficult to conceive) that alone would form a counterpoise to the power of the prince, and a degree of liberty would be immediately introduced." There is a regard to public opinion, and decency of character, which the sultan himself must observe; and the decisions of public discussions, may almost be called a lower house, a democratic check on the regal power.

In the circulation of a well-conducted newspaper, the public welfare is materially concerned; in trying moments they give the alarm, they diminish that danger which they cannot prevent, by preparing the public mind. If it were possible for a publication of this kind to remain independent, the crown could not shelter a bad minister, nor the misguided multitude a mock patriot. But such is the magic omnipotence of corruption, that it pervades alike the study of the literary man, and the cabinet of the statesman; it diffuses a sickly yellow hue of party jealousy over the report of a public debate; it cripples the arguments, it shortens or obscures the illustrations of an inimical minister, but extends the flowery harraque of many a favourite speaker, through long, elaborate, and well-studied periods; while the bon-vivant and his cher-amie, yawning over their souchong and ardent only for the poignant paragraph and modern anecdote, curse those tedious discussions, which they will not attempt to read.

The same evil hath also conducted, in a considerable degree, to sap the foundations of impartial dramatic criticism. The paltry consideration of ivory tickets and advertisements of plays, with the smiles, the suppers, and the well-timed douceurs of managers and stage heroines, have long rendered our public prints the suspicious vehicles of praise undeserved, and misplaced panegyric. After retiring from the theatre, disgusted with a bad play and execrable acting, have we not repeatedly seen, in the modern companions of our breakfast, the nonsense and rant of a preceding night, metamorphosed into dramatic excellence and first rate performance.

We are informed by a writer, whose vigour appears to increase with the political and contradictory riddles he undertakes to support, but whose digressions are the most interesting and entertaining part of his works; we are informed, that the first publications of this species, in England, resembled an extraordinary gazette; that they were called English Mercuries, and published during the reign of Elizabeth, to rouse national resentment, and support public spirit, against the terror of the Spanish armada. But a regular daily paper was not printed in this kingdom till the war between King Charles the First and the Parliament; and it has been remarked, that in those remote discordant times, as in the late distracted state of our Gallic neighbors, a printing press was considered as a necessary and important part of the camp baggage. Each party was desirous of victory with the pen as well as the sword besides the advantage of a rapid diffusion of information. By Cromwell it was carried to Scotland, and Higgins printed the first paper in that kingdom, in 1652, it was called "A Diurnal of some Passages and Affairs." &c.

The Romans had a publication which nearly approached to a modern newspaper; it was called Acta Diurna, or Daily Occurrences, resembling the present accounts of births, deaths and marriages, &c. An extract from one of these may be seen in Petronius, an author, as singular for the indecorous subjects he handled, as the classic purity of his language. The debates of the Senate were also published at the same period, under the title Publica Acta.

The next paper of this kind appeared at Venice, and was called Gazetta, from the name of a piece of money for which it was sold; and (as I understand, from the same respectable authority to which I have just referred) was distributed in manuscript, long after the invention of printing. Of these, thirty volumes were collected by that helluo, librorum, Magliabechi, and are still preserved in the library he left. The Paris Gazette, under the management of Mons. Renoudot, followed next. In London, the Daily Advertiser, of Jenour, led the way. The prodigious profits of this gentleman's paper tempted a crowd of competitors, too long to enumerate in this place. In 1793, the newspapers published in England and Scotland, daily, alternate, and weekly, amounted to one hundred and sixteen. Their attempts were, for the most part, successful, and induced government to claim a share in their profits, I believe half a crown in every advertisement, which with the stamps and duty on paper, I understand adds to the public revenue more than two hundred and fifty thousand pounds a year, besides providing bread and employment for thousands. They are, notwithstanding, regarded with a timid, hostile eye, by most governments, and have of late, been saddled with enormous loads, unreasonably, and, in the article of paper, with an injurious partiality, augmented.

"I confess, with concern," said a Caledonian barrister "the licentiousness of the press; but let us remember, it is a public creditor to which religion, morality, genius and science, are indebted; it preserved the constitution of our sister kingdom, and restored our own. If, in assuming the office of a censor, it sometimes goes astray, let it be controlled with parental tenderness like a favorite child; let us not, by well meant but judicious severity, injure its health, and break its spirits."

FROM THE BOSTON REPERTORY.

"WE WILL REJOICE."

Is there a federalist who has considered the progress of political delusion as presaging the downfall of constitutional principles in New England? Is there one who has feared that we must inevitably follow Rhode Island, New York, New Jersey, and Pennsylvania into that scene of uproar and confusion, in which they have been struggling and sinking? let him now contemplate the political aspect of New Hampshire, Massachusetts and Connecticut. These states in which information is certainly more generally diffused than in any other, are rapidly returning to their high predilection for the federal, as the only rational, safe and honest cause. Every exertion has been made by the Democratic party to degrade the state of New Hampshire. But the impostor Griswold and his little band of Catalinian associates have been arrested in their full career. The insult offered to the common sense of those true hearted disciples of the Washington politics has aroused them to a resentment, and democracy at once makes a retrograde stride.

Massachusetts, ever jealous of its freedom, and prompt to manifest her sense of wrong, exhibited as we have often remarked, and still repeat with sincere pleasure, during the late session of the legislature, more of the enthusiasm of enlightened freemen, than has been witnessed for years. The exemplary spirit of her legislature has been seconded by a strong disposition of inquiry throughout almost every part of the state. The people are at last convinced, that it is not the best to be entirely at the mercy of any portion of the union. The undeniable and undeniable fact, that congress is managed by a midnight jumbo, to which the nabobs of Virginia dictate, has excited just alarm. Add to this that, at home they see rouges, notorious cheats, and unprincipled vagabonds flushed with hope and aiming to rise on the wreck of our state independence. The democratic party has, "fallen, fallen, fallen," though never high, under the management and superintendence of Anthony Pasquin. There let it lie.

But Connecticut, against which the demons of disorganization have lately bent their utmost force, has sustained the shock and gloriously triumphs. The Jacobins, in that State did not merely and well tried institutions their newspapers, like Massachusetts, but they selves boldly. Their objection to the State—to tear and erect no one knew what could have been so rules, whom they had the standard of Democracy and. Abraham B. repoussed the cause of the Democratic representative. The State Legislature has, at of this happy development its number!

Vermont shows sympathy. Mr. Elliot was lately obnoxious to the is supposed to be re-elected the Federal candidate for

BALTIMORE.

Arrived, Schooner Harriet, from Jeremie. Sailed from the brig Jager, Gate Nickerbon, for Baltimore, and Mary for Philadelphia. in that State did not merely rail at the good and well tried institutions of our fathers in their newspapers, like the democrats of Massachusetts, but they declared themselves boldly. Their object was to revolutionize the State—to tear down every thing and erect no one knew what. No reasoning could have been so effectual—multi- tudes, whom they had deluded, have quit the standard of Democracy. Pierpont Edwards and Abraham Bishop, and again espoused the cause of "steady habits." The Democratic representation in the State Legislature has, at the first moment of this happy development, lost fifteen of its number!

Vermont shows symptoms of salutary reflection. Mr. Elliot who will be particularly obnoxious to the Junia in Congress is supposed to be re-elected, and likewise the Federal candidate for governor.

MONDAY, OCTOBER 8.

Patrick Ramsay's reply to Alexander Moore, will appear to-morrow.

Arrived brig Friendship, Roberts, from Trinidad. On the 5th ult. the friendship experienced a severe gale, which threw her on her beam ends, and obliged her to cut away her main-mast, and fore-top-mast. The Friendship had taken the crew out of the brig Harriot, Smith, of Norwich, in lat. 23, 30, N. long. 66 W. the Harriot had cut both her masts, and was reduced to such a state as to oblige the captain and crew to abandon her; she was from Demarara for New York with a cargo of sugar. The Friendship had spoken a ship supposed English, northward of lat. 23, 30, N. long. 66 W. the Harriot received from the schooner William, of and for this port, from St. Martins, part of the crew of the schooner Hill, of Fredericksburg, which was away in the harbour of St. Martins the same gale, two thirds of her outward cargo on board.

Extract of a letter from Wilmington, (Del) dated Thursday afternoon, August 4, 1804.

I have just time to inform you that Rodney has a majority of 1071 votes over Bayard in New Castle county and Bayard has a majority of 338 in Kent county.— The accounts from Sussex are not yet received, but there can be no doubt but that from the number of votes polled Sussex will give Bayard a majority of 800 or 1000 so that there is no doubt Bayard is elected. Mitchell the federal candidate for governor is no doubt also elected. The Demos here have long faces. I shall write more fully by the mail to night.

The Feds count on a majority of 300 in the state. The Demos allow them 250.

A letter from Dover dated Thursday morning, 4 o'clock says—this morning we finished reading our votes; out of 2398 votes, Mitchell had 1362, Haslett 1034; majority for Mitchell 328. Bayard had 1374, Rodney had 1016; majority for Bayard 358!

Extract of another letter from Wilmington, dated Thursday evening Oct. 4.

"The great Bayard has regained his seat in the national council—Federalism is completely Triumphant in Delaware. The sun of federalism though obscured for a while by the mist of democracy, has now broke forth in this state with renewed Splendor. From the returns already received here, there can be no doubt but that the federal majority in the whole state is four hundred. General Mitchell is elected Governor; James A. Bayard representative to congress, and the legislature is federal. Now let the sage of Monticello tremble.—Let him know that the people of Delaware though for a while deceived by his flattery and his promises are not to be cajoled for ever, but that they will respect the talents and worth of James A. Bayard, all his opinions to the contrary notwithstanding. There are strong hopes that before many years, the Sun of federalism will once more illuminate the whole union. New Hampshire and Delaware are regained; Massachusetts and Connecticut have increased in strength, and strong expectation are entertained of Vermont and Rhode-Island. Let the federalists keep up their spirits. Though Jacobinism has exerted all its arts, still truth will prevail, and the people will yet do right."

Extract of a letter from a gentleman at Natchez to his friend in Pittsburg, dated August 13.

"Mr. Kemper, formerly a merchant at Bayou Sara, has lately made an attempt to possess himself of Baton Rouge, having under his command between 40 & 50 men; he marched from the neighbourhood of the line of demarcation between this territory and West Florida, on the 7th instant. On their way they made prisoners of alcade O Conner, Pintado, the surveyor, and an officer of the militia, and burnt Pintado's house and gin. They arrived on the following morning about day light, near the fort. The Spanish commandant, apprized of their intentions, had posted a picket of eighteen or twenty men, who hailed the party as they approached; they immediately answered by a volley from their rifles, which dispersed the Spaniards, two of whom were observed to fall. Kemper returned on the following day with his party, to Bayou Sara, and encamped near the house of a Mr. Cobb—Col. Fulton was sent after them with a command of 209 men. It was reported yesterday that Fulton was within twelve miles of Kemper's camp, and that the latter was preparing to set out to meet him determined to give him battle. The whole province of Louisiana from the Belize to Natchitoches, Apaluso, &c. are nearly in a state of rebellion, they are dissatisfied with the present mode of government, and declare they will be a state, enact laws for themselves, appoint their own Governor, &c.

"P. S. This moment the mail arrived from New Orleans; Kemper and his party did not stand to fight."

Mr. Snowden,

The uniform tenor of a life spent among an extensive and respectable circle of friends in Alexandria, will I trust evince for me, how unpleasant is the necessity for thus obtruding myself upon the public attention. But the candor of the discerning and impartial will, I hope, readily admit, that this necessity is imposed on me, by a publication in Saturday's paper, under the signature of Alexander Moore. To obviate any unfavorable impressions which might be made on the public mind, by the statement, which Mr. Moore, there professes to give, of an affray between him and myself, I beg leave to submit the following, which in every particular, I do most sincerely believe to be just and true.

On Thursday last, while engaged in conversation at Mr. James Wilson's store, I heard the report of a pistol. Having some reason to expect a rencounter between Mr. Moore, and my brother Patrick, I felt some degree of alarm, and hastened to the spot, to know the issue; when I reached it, I found my brother unarmed, and with his front exposed, calling to A. Moore, who was in the act of cocking a pistol "fire sir." Hurried on by the strong impulse of fraternal affection, by the anxiety to protect a brother thus defenceless, I leaped upon the back of Mr. Moore, with an intention to prevent his firing. A scuffle immediately ensued, and I struck him, which produced a retort; but whether in the issue of the contest he had, cause to boast, I know not—I profess no skill in the pugilistic art; and but a small portion of that "agility," for which Mr. Moore, is renowned. I have however no doubt of Mr. Moore's sincerity when he professes himself sorry for my exertions, which he states consisted in biting and scratching. Those who have since seen him, have perceived that his face bore other testimony, than that of scratches, and I hold myself justifiable in biting the finger, which would attempt the abominable act of Gouging.

This to the best of my recollection is a full and accurate statement of my share in the transaction of Thursday afternoon. In justice to myself, and not for the gratification of Mr. Moore, I declare that I most severely condemn myself for any interference, but in extenuation, I plead the feelings of a brother, and the influence of erroneous impressions. I did not know that the pistol was fired by my brother, or I should not have attempted to deprive Mr. M. of that equal chance, which he himself had refused. This explanation of my conduct, will I hope remove from me the blame which is generally attached to improper interference. It may have been expected by some that I should have challenged Mr. Moore. Being obliged to consider myself as the aggressor in having struck the first blow, having obtained an equal share of the battle, and leaving Mr. M. with the appropos epithets before mentioned attached to him by me, I did not feel myself justified in calling him out, but I confess that I did not expect that a man of courage would have so tamely submitted to language generally considered, among gentlemen, as an insult demanding immediate reparation. There are besides other circumstances which affix a stigma to Mr. M's character, which, until he removes, he cannot expect that kind of notice from a gentleman. I mean his refusal to meet my brother, under the pretence that his challenge was not delivered by a friend, having previously declared he did not wish Mr. R. to procure a friend, but would fight him without one.

The public will shortly know from certificates which will be produced to them, that Mr. M's refusal to meet my Brother could proceed from no other cause than want of firmness to encounter the danger.

'Tis not in the boldness of conscious innocence, but the hardihood of impudence. Mr. M. makes his appeal to the public, as a quiet and inoffensive member of society. Could I have been certain that the publication would have engaged the attention of those only who know us both, the public had never seen a reply to it from me. I would have been content to have rested my justification upon our respective characters against the assertions of one, whom the public's most favorable opinion is that, he is a forward and assuming young man, but who I believe to be, as I have said, and again repeat, a Scoundrel, and a Coward.

The merit of the above little work will be best appreciated from the number of editions it has passed through in England. The idea of it was originally taken from Dr. Watts's treatise on education section 2d, on the exercise of the natural powers of children, and its execution by Mrs. Trimmer, reflects great honor on her talents and character. It is written in the most easy or familiar and engaging style, is admirably adapted to please the imagination and excite the curiosity of children, to a further acquaintance with the great object of which it treats.

TRAVELS IN GREECE.

PROPOSALS,
FOR PUBLISHING BY SUBSCRIPTION,
THE TRAVELS OF Anacharsis the Younger,
IN GREECE:
During the middle of the fourth Century, before the Christian Era,
With copious Notes and References.

BY THE ABBE BARTHELEMY,
Keeper of the Medals in the Cabinet of the King of France, and Member of the Royal Academy of Inscriptions and Belles Lettres.
Translated from the French.

First American, from the fourth London edition, IN FOUR VOLUMES.

THE work now offered to the American reader exhibits a complete view of the antiquities, manners, customs, religious ceremonies, laws, arts, and literature of ancient Greece, at the period of its greatest splendour. A knowledge of these has hitherto been only attainable by a laborious perusal of writers who have been little solicitous to join entertainment with instruction. The Travels of Anacharsis, on the contrary, are so written, that the reader may frequently be induced to imagine he is perusing a work of mere amusement, invention, and fancy; till his eye glances to the bottom of the page, when he perceives there is scarcely a sentence, and not a single fact or circumstance, but is supported by the authority of some ancient author. The amazing number of these quotations may, perhaps at first sight, seem to have been unnecessary, and to have more the appearance of a parade of erudition, than to be of any real utility: but it is to be remembered that, at the same time that they must be highly acceptable to the man of real learning, by enabling him to refer immediately to the original author, they are extremely useful, nay, we may say, absolutely necessary, even to such readers as can never be supposed to have any intention to consult the authorities quoted; as they clearly shew that such an idea, or such a circumstance, is not merely a decoration or the offspring of the fancy of the author, but immediately taken from some ancient writer, and therefore perfectly accordant to the general scope and plan of the work.

TERMS.

- I. The first Edition in America of Anacharsis's Travels, will be comprised in four Vols. Octavo.
- II. It shall be printed on handsome wave paper and a new type casting for the purpose. Each Volume will contain about 400 pages.
- III. The price to Subscribers, per Vol. bound and lettered, will be 2 dollars; in boards, 1 dollar and 75 cents, to be paid on the delivery of each Volume.
- The European Edition sells at 12 dollars per sett.
- IV. There shall be a handsome Map of Greece given with the first Volume, to be executed by one of the best Engravers.
- V. Those who obtain ten Subscribers and become responsible for the payment of the same shall receive one copy gratis. The work is now at Press, and shall be finished with all possible dispatch.
- Subscriptions to the above work received at Robert & John Gray's book Store, Alexandria.
